

Unit 7

Data Abstraction

This week's consideration focused on various data structures found in software development that are used to programme logic for data storage and manipulation.

General thoughts on this unit

My career is in software development, and over the duration of the career I have been exposed to several data structures such as those presented in this unit. Prior exposure made for a very familiar understanding of the topic at hand.